In this request for Proposals, the U.S. Information Agency is placing the administrative cooperative agreement award for the Fulbright Senior Scholar Program in competition for the first time in the 52-year history of the Program. Deadline for receipt of proposals is February 8, 1999. The cooperative agreement will begin o/a October 1, 1999.

Program Information

Overview

The Fulbright Program was created by the U.S. Congress at the end of World War II to exchange U.S. and foreign students and scholars, providing them with the opportunity to experience firsthand the political, economic and cultural institutions and societies in each other's countries. In the intervening years, the Fulbright Program has evolved into the premier educational exchange program sponsored by the people of the United States through their federal government, and thus an important element in the conduct of U.S. foreign affairs. The Fulbright Program, which now extends to approximately 140 foreign countries and involves 5,000 participants overall every year, has helped to form and inform tens of thousands of the world's leaders in every academic and professional field. The Senior Scholar portion of the Fulbright Program will engage approximately 1500 scholars and professionals in FY 1999.

The hallmark of the Fulbright Program is binationalism. The United States and foreign governments, educational and other public and private institutions are all partners in this enterprise. In many countries of the world, financial contributions from governments or public/private sources match or exceed those of the United States. Because of its binational nature, the profile of the Fulbright Program worldwide reflects a range of objectives and interests.

The Fulbright Program's grant-making authority is contained in the Mutual Educational and Cultural Exchange Act of 1961, Pub. L. 87–256, as amended, also known as the Fulbright-Hays Act. The purpose of the Act is ''to enable the Government of the United States to increase mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries* * ; to strengthen the ties which unite us with other nations by demonstrating the educational and cultural interest, developments, and achievements of the people of the United States and other nations * * and thus to assist in the development of friendly, sympathetic and peaceful relations between the United States and the other countries of the world.'' The Fulbright Program is funded through annual Congressional appropriations to USIA and receives significant financial support from partner governments and private donors worldwide.

In July 1997, a distinguished group of private U.S. and international professionals organized as the Steering Committee on the Future of the Fulbright Educational Exchange Program, under the auspices of the National Humanities Center, carried out a comprehensive evaluation of all of the components of the Fulbright Program, issuing a formal report entitled ''Fulbright at Fifty'' (available via internet at www.nhc.rpt.nc.us:8080 or in hard copy as a part of the Solicitation Package). The Steering Committee's report reaffirmed the importance of the Fulbright Program, concluding that it remains ''a vital and successful means to address the current issues facing established and emerging nations in the post-Cold War era.'' With specific reference to the Fulbright Senior Scholar Program the Steering Committee's report made several suggestions that were drawn on by USIA in the preparation of this Request for Proposals.

Fulbright Senior Scholar Program

For more than fifty years, the Fulbright Senior Scholar Program has offered grants for college and university faculty, as well as for non-academic professionals (such as lawyers and journalists) and independent scholars, to lecture and conduct research abroad. Thousands of U.S. and foreign scholars and professionals have participated since the Fulbright Program's inception. In FY 2000, the Fulbright Senior Scholar Program will send abroad approximately 750 U.S. scholars and professionals to lecture and conduct
